The business of media presents the critical yet careful analysis of the rapidly changing media industry that students need in order to get behind the headlines and understand our increasingly media-saturated society. The writing is clear and jargon-free, accessible to undergraduates without requiring a background in economics. Key features examine the basic dynamics that underlie the changing media industry and the possible influence these changes are having on society. Society's insatiable quest for profits and democratic society's need for a media system that serves the public interest draws from both social and economic theory to create two conceptual frameworks: market model and public sphere model. Focus on developments in the last decade to major media industry trends, mapping structural organization, the rise of media conglomerates, and their new strategies. Assesses the impact of recent changes in the media industry using the public sphere model on social and political life. Offers clear, concise, jargon-free writing accessible to all students and professionals without an economics background.

Three basic premises guide this highly successful introductory text: first, that theory and research must be both comprehensive and clear; second, that the text must show how sociology is relevant both to the study of society and to students' lives; and third, that sociology can play a valuable role in teaching critical thinking skills. To that end, this solid, well-respected text combines a balanced three-perspective approach with excellent student-oriented examples and distinctive social policy sections in a concise presentation that offers an alternative to full-length books.

This volume examines four key ideas that have played a central role in discussion and thought about the nature of society: industrial society, democracy, individualism, and modernity. Within each chapter, a number of ancillary ideas are discussed, such as alienation, technology, capitalism, socialism, social class, citizenship, bureaucracy, and community. The thoughts of Karl Marx, Max Weber, Emile Durkheim, and Georg Simmel on these topics are also discussed.
